C- Reading

5- Read the following passage, then answer the questions: (10 Marks)

Until the 1920s, listening to the radio remained a hobby enjoyed by only a few enthusiasts. Then, in 1922 the BBC began transmitting regular radio programmes. Television began only seven years later, but there were very few television sets in the country. Incredibly, many of those early TV sets were built by their owners! The radio offered news and entertainment programmes, but critics said that the large number of programmes which were about theatre, literature, classical music and opera only appealed to a small number of people. Many listeners wanted to know why their tastes were being ignored. In 1936, the BBC started broadcasting a few hours of television each day. You could only pick up the broadcasts if you lived in London, but there were now more TV sets tuning in. With more channels in the 1950s and the 1960s, as well as lower prices, it was not long before almost everyone had access to a television set. It is hard now to imagine that whole families once used to gather around the radio to hear their favourite programme.
